TMJ for the Dental Professional

About the Course

Research in Craniofacial Pain and Temporomandibular Disorder diagnosis and management has been extensive in the last 10 years. Dental hygienists who have not been directly involved in this area may have gotten behind mainstream management of their patients. Treatment methods that were appropriate 10 to 20 years ago may no longer be appropriate. As with other disciplines of dentistry and medicine, research and new diagnostic technology change the methods for proper treatment. This course will provide an opportunity to get up-to-speed on current literature and treatment techniques. A research/evidence based approach to diagnosis and management of Craniofacial Pain/TMD will be presented.

Some of the topics to be presented are:

What Are TMJ Disorders?

Major Philosophies of TMD Treatment

Anterior Repositioning Appliance Therapy

MRI of the TMJ

How to make an occlusal appliance

TMJ/Craniofacial Pain Injections

Surgical vs Non-Surgical Care for TMD

Litigation and TMD

Occlusal adjustment as a finishing technique

TMD Case Finishing

Orthodontic, Crown and Bridge, & Partial Denture
